MRS. ZACK HARDIN DIES SUDDENLY

After A Week's Illness--Remains Brought To Cloverport From Holt For Funeral Services And Interment Sunday Afternoon.

THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Z. T. Hardin, one of the best loved women of Holt and this community, answered the final call early Saturday morning at her home at Holt. Mrs. Hardin's death was most unexpected, as she had been ill of pneumonia only a week. She was the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Skillman McGavock, wife of the late John H. McGavock, and was born at the old McGavock homestead, near Cloverport, June 26, 1873.

The news of Mrs. Hardin's demise caused general regret in Cloverport, for she had always come back here nearly every month since her marriage about fifteen years ago. She joined the Methodist church of this city when a school girl and removed her membership to the Holt church, of which she was an active member at the time of her death.

Mrs. Hardin leaves her husband and three children, Lucile, Virgil and Marion. Miss Lucile is attending school in Louisville and the other children are at the home of their grand-mother, Mrs. McGavock. She was the sister of Miss Lucy McGavock, Leon, Marion, Gordon, John and Abe S. McGavock.

The body was brought to the home of Mrs. Emma Skillman Saturday evening and the funeral was held in her residence Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by the Rev. H. E. Jarboe, pastor of the Holt church. The interment took place in the Cloverport cemetery.

Beautiful flowers covered the grave. Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Thos. Flood, Chas. Reidel, Mr. and Mrs. Dutschke, Mr. Shellman and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Beard, Jess Miller.

WILL ADMINISTER SERUM TO FINE HOGS

Prof. E. B. Goode, of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington, Ky., arrived this morning to administer serum to sixty fine Duroc Jersey hogs belonging to Maxie R. Walters, near town. The serum which makes the swine immune to cholera, was shipped here direct from Michigan and the amount received cost $100. — Etnow News.

"The Van Dusvan."

A pretty little yacht swung into this port Monday morning. It belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Van Dusvan, of Pittsburgh, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Dorothy, and their son, Charles Van Dusvan, Jr. They left home in January to attend the Mardi Gras, but their trip down the river was so pleasantly lazy they did not reach New Orleans in time. They had every convenience and all the luxuries of a house-boat. The object of their outing was for the health of the daughter, who has much improved since their departure from home.

MR. McCUBINS

Dies After Lingering Illness At His Home In Stephensport --Funeral Held Yesterday Afternoon

As the News goes to press, word has been received of the death of George McCubins, of Stephensport, who has been ill health for the last three years.

Mr. McCubins was past sixty years of age and had been in the mercantile business at Stephensport many years.

He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. L. D. Fox, Mrs. Godfrey Haswell and one son, Brown McCubins.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon and conducted by Rev. Jas. Lewis, of the Fordsville Baptist church.

Little Mary Christiana Hamman Celebrates.

A very pleasant time was that enjoyed by the little friends of Mary Christiana Hamman at a party given by her mother, Mrs. Chas. Hamman, Saturday afternoon in honor of the little daughter's seventh birthday. The invited guests were: Lida May English, Louella Farmer, Cissell Simons, Lillian Polk, Jencie Wills, Jane Lightfoot, Helen Kingsbury, Emily Reid, Eleanor Reid, Mary Pate, Lena May, Elsie May, Louise Weatherholt, Cecil Jolly, Eva Jolly, Vera Jolly, Dossie Brown, Kathleen Squires, Isabelle Burn, Mary Gibson, Chloria May Seaton, Mary Owen Oelze, Martha Reid, Alice Cleo Chapman, Virginia Davis, Little Charlotte Lee Hamman and Mary Christiana Hamman.

Mrs. Hamman was assisted in entertaining the children by Mrs. Jane Gibson, Mrs. Benton E. bank and Miss Bessie Mitchell. A general good time, music and games were enjoyed by those present. Mr. Braband took a picture of the happy group. Delightful refreshments were served and then followed the inspection of the many sweet little gifts presented to Mary Christiana.

The little folks will long remember the joyous occasion and when the seven little candles were blown out, there were many wishes for many, many happy returns of the day, each as happy as that one.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, God in his good and wise providence has seen fit to call home to his final resting place our much beloved sister, Mrs. Lizzie Green Robertson, wife of C. S. Robertson. Whereas we the members of the Black Lick Baptist Church, Sunday-school and Woman's Missionary Union, hold in sacred remembrance this dear sister. Therefore be it resolved.

First; That by her death her husband has lost his faithful and affectionate companion; her children, a loving mother, and the church a most devoted member.

Second; That we deeply mourn our loss and humbly bow to the will of Him who doeth all things for the good of those who love Him.

Third; That while we deeply sympathize with the husband and children, we say to them, mourn not for our loss in her eternal gain, and if we put our trust in our Savior as she ask her family to do in her last hour of earthly life we shall meet her where parting is no more. Oh for the excellency of that inward knowledge!

Fourth; That a copy of this be sent to the Western Recorder and to our county papers and also to her bereaved family.—Mrs. J. T. Jones, Mrs. J. M. Craig, R. S. Weller and T. H. Moorman.

Successful Sale.

Alexander's White Sale was the most successful enterprise ever made in the mercantile business at Irvington. It is being followed by a good, steady trade, which is due to the new and complete line of wash materials and other spring goods.

TWO STATES BANK CLOSED.

Secretary of State Proceeds Against Stephensport Bank. Loan Too Much Money. Had Deposits Amounting To More Than $50,000.

INSTITUTION MIGHT PAY OUT.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—On account of alleged excessive loans the Two-States Bank of Steppesport, was ordered to close its doors and go into liquidation by Dr. Ben L. Bruner, Secretary of State. The order to close was contained in a telegram sent to the officers of the bank yesterday by Dr. Bruner. The bank was capitalized at $15,000 and had deposits amounting to more than $50,000. It is not believed that the depositors will lose anything. The bank was examined recently by the State Bank Examiner.

WILL PAY OUT.

Owensboro, Ky., March 9.—John F. Adair, cashier of the Two-States Bank at Stephensport, Breckenridge county, which was closed by the Secretary of State following an examination by an inspector, said that in his opinion the bank would pay dollar for dollar and is thoroughly solvent. When asked what caused the failure of the bank, he stated that the State Bank Inspector was the primary cause, saying he had been very critical in his inspection, causing the stockholders and directors to become afraid of the institution. He declared that the bank had never failed to meet an obligation. The greater portion of depositors are farmers in Breckenridge county.

DOUBLE WEDDING

Takes Place At West View--Miss Henninger and Mr. Norton, Miss Frank and Mr. Henninger Wed.

At seven o'clock Wednesday evening, March 8, Dr. Shepherd, of Hardinsburg, in the new M. E. church at West View, pronounced one wedding ceremony which united the lives of two couples. One of the contracting couples was Miss Mattie Henninger and Mr. Marshall Norton; the other was Miss Allie Frank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Frank, and Mr. R. W. Henninger.

Mr. Norton, a well known teacher, has lately engaged in merchandising at West View. His bride is the daughter of Mrs. Isabel Henninger. The other groom, Mr. R. W. Henninger, is a brother of Mrs. Norton.

The popular young people begin their wedded lives with the happiest wishes of numerous friends throughout the county, all being well known.

DINNER WITHOUT MEAT.

Ascending Butcher's Bill Has Something to Do With It.

A dinner without meat, especially in the winter time, is less of a surprise to meat eaters than it used to be. Only avowed vegetarian families whose names were written boldly in the Vegetarian society's records would once have submitted to such a bill of fare. Possibly the family doctor who in season and out has preached "less meat" for some years is as responsible as any one person for the change in diet. Possibly the ascending butcher's bills have had something to do with it. Whatever the cause, less meat is eaten now than ever before in the memory of persons who are living or of their immediate ancestors. But a vegetarian diet in a house where a variety of appetizing food is demanded does not decrease the cost of living. To have variety without meat a well set table means vegetables out of season and quantities of nuts and fruits that come high.

At a dinner served by a young housewife of advanced ideas the other evening the bill of fare included bean stew with dumplings, mock turkey, mashed potatoes, squash, lettuce salad with toasted cheese crackers, orange sherbet and coffee. For the stew the common white dry beans used for baking had been soaked the previous night and the next morning parboiled in water with a little soda and then rinsed thoroughly, covered with water and stewed tender with a large onion and carrot, both chopped coarsely, a cupful of stalk celery cut fine and a red pepper cut in pieces. When the beans were soft they were seasoned with salt and black pepper and the dumplings were dropped in. For the dumplings sift two cupfuls of flour with a couple of tablespoonsfuls of baking powder and mix with half a cupful of milk. Drop the batter by spoonfuls into the hot stew, cover closely and boil for twelve minutes without raising the cover. Turn the stew into the middle of a deep platter and arrange the dumplings around the edge.

Artificial Rose Making.
Don't throw away your bits—even small bits—of silk and velvet, but save them for making the very fashionable flowers which ornament neckwear hats and frocks.

You have no idea what charming little floral specimens you can evolve.

A PRETTY SPRAY OF MOSS ROSE BUDS.

A bias piece of pink satin rolled tightly and incased in a calyx of green silk or velvet will materialize into a lovely rosebud. A bunch of these buds hung from narrow ribbons are smart to trim a blouse or to place among folds of the lingerie jabot. All kinds of flowers are made at home by the skillful worker who tries her art on the white kid butterflies that so modishly trim big black velvet hats this winter.

When you have rheumatism in your foot or instep, apply Chamberlain's Liniment and you will get quick relief. It costs but a quarter. Why suffer? For sale by all dealers.

Household Hints.
Very little water should be used in washing oilcloth, as some of it will seep through to the cloth beneath and rot it. Use a flannel cloth well wrung out and wipe the floor until clean. Salsoda will aid greatly. Wipe the white spots caused by spilling any hot liquid on the oilcloth with a few drops of spirits of camphor.

To sweep a stair carpet hold a dust pan under each step and brush with a whisk broom.

Freshly spilled ink on carpets may be removed by taking up as much as possible with a spoon, then pouring on cold water repeatedly, taking it up with a spoon. Lay a cloth around the spot so it will not spread. Then apply a weak solution of oxalic acid, sponging this up quickly, and if the color is altered apply ammonia water.

Black lace may be sponged with green tea and wound around a bottle to dry. Be careful not to place it near a fire, as it will make the lace look rusty.

To remove wine stains sprinkle the spot when the wine is spilled with salt and you will find that the stain will wash out quickly; otherwise spread the spots over a bowl and pour on boiling water with force.

Get Ready for Spring--Advertise

John W. Sickelsmith, of Greensboro, Pa., has three children, and like most children they frequently take cold. "We have tried several kinds of cough medicine," he says, "but have never found any yet that did them as much good as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." For sale by all dealers.

T. COLEMAN DU PONT MAKES $1,000,000 GOOD ROAD OFFER

Proposes Highway 103 Miles Long and a Hundred Feet Wide.

T. Coleman du Pont of Wilmington, Del., has offered to advance $1,000,000 to the state of Delaware for the construction of a modern highway the entire length of the commonwealth. The distance is 103 miles.

Mr. du Pont wants the road to be 100 feet in width, but his advisers have urged him to make the width either sixty or eighty feet.

English Clay Pipes.

The clay pipe, which is vanishing from the Fleet street chophouse, was the only variety smoked in this country until quite recent times. The clay pipe made its appearance in England in the later years of the sixteenth century. Writing about a century later, a French author remarks that the English "invented the pipes of baked clay which are now used everywhere."

"Broseley, in Staffordshire, has been famous for its pipes and clay from the days of Elizabeth," writes W. A. Penn in "The Sovereign Herb." "Now all the clay of which white pipes are manufactured comes from Newton Abbot and Kingsteignton, in Devonshire. It is sent to all parts of England and the world in rough lumps about the size of quarter loaves, weighing some twenty-eight pounds each."—London Spectator.

Orange Fritters.

Florida oranges, which are just coming into season, are the best for orange fritters. The following rule is recommended by a high culinary authority: Peel the oranges and cut them in thin slices. Divide each slice in half, dip it into a fritter batter and fry in smoking hot fat. After frying and draining dip each fritter in powdered sugar. For the batter put a cupful of flour into a bowl, mix with it the yolk of a raw egg, a level teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of salad oil and enough water to make a batter that will not run. Just before using the batter beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth and mix it lightly with the batter.

PREVENTION OF DUST ON ROADS

Permanent Treatment of Public Highways With Tar.

PRINCIPAL MATERIAL USED.

If Work is Properly Done a Tarred
Road After Being Opened For Traffic
a Short While Takes an Appearance Closely Resembling Asphalt—it is Waterproof and Dustless.

Although the problem of dust prevention on public highways is by no means a new one, its importance has been greatly accentuated by the comparatively recent introduction of the automobile, says the Scientific American. The dust raising tendency of the latter is due to the destructive shearing action of the tires of the driving wheels and the intense suction and eddying producing effect of the car body in passing swiftly over surfaces which have been already loosened up by tire action. In the days of the horse drawn vehicle the iron shoes of the horse and the tires had a tendency to consolidate rather than loosen up the surface of a well made macadam road, and the comparatively small amount of dust which gathered could be sufficiently laid by one or two daily trips of the watering cart. The advent of the automobile, however, has complicated the problem greatly, and it has become necessary not merely to find a more efficient means for laying the dust, but to provide also a method of road construction which will more firmly bind the road material together and enable it to stand up under the extreme conditions which the automobile has imposed.

The most valuable quality in any dust preventive is its ability to hold together the finely divided material which is produced on or near the surface of the road. The value of any oil, asphalt, emulsion or what not lies at the last analysis in its "binding power," and this quality in any dust preventive is proportionate to the amount of bituminous base which it contains.

The principal material used in the permanent treatment of roads with tar are coal tar, refined coal tar and water gas tar. They may be used effectively either by applying them to a road already finished or by incorporating them in the surface material of the road during construction. In applying the tar to an old road the surface should be thoroughly dry, comparatively warm and free from dust.

Moisture prevents the tar from proper contact with the stone, and a cold surface stiffens the material and prevents its being absorbed. Before the application is made ruts and hollows should be filled and the surface brought up to a smooth and even condition. The tar, heated to about 190 degrees F., is spread upon the road through a hose or by other suitable means and is then thoroughly broomed in.

After this has been done, to secure good results, the surface treated should be closed to all traffic for about twelve hours so as to give the tar an opportunity to thoroughly sink in the surface. Next a coat of clean sand or stone chips should be applied to absorb any excess tar and dry up the surface, as it were. The road should then be rolled thoroughly to bring it into condition.

In applying the tar in new construction the road should be formed and consolidated without the use of water. The voids should be filled with fine stone chips free from dust, and care must be taken not to roll the surface too heavily or the tar will not adhere properly. Hot tar may be applied through all of the courses as they are laid and rolled, but occasionally the upper course only is so treated. After tarring, a top dressing of material is laid on and the surface is thoroughly rolled. The tar spreading may be done either by hand, in which case an excess above what is necessary will probably be used, or it may be spread on an apparatus mounted on wheels, the tar being discharged under pressure.

If the work be properly done, a tarred road after being open to traffic for a short while takes on an appearance closely resembling asphalt, being smooth and firm, practically noiseless and more resilient than asphalt. It is largely waterproof, practically dustless, and the resistance to traction is less than that of an untreated macadam road.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Cockney Chivalry.
There was a crush in the pit, and the anaemic looking girl stood with the late comers behind the last bench. The young man in front of her, comfortably seated, was not too absorbed in the musical comedy to note that the girl looked tired as she doggedly stood out the first act. He rose when the curtain fell. "Would you," he asked, pushing past her, "like to mind my seat while I go out for a drink?" The age of chivalry is not past.—London Chronicle.

Burlap and Leather.

Very attractive book covers, table mats, etc., are made of cut leather over burlap. It is difficult to describe the real beauty of these. Of course the design is cut out in the leather, which is suede by preference, and the burlap is then stitched to it. Sometimes small metal beads, like tiny nails, give the effect of old hammered work.

Instead of leather, velvet may be used for the lighter articles. Some lovely color combinations are obtained, such as green and biscuit color, royal blue and black, lavender and dark purple, brown and terra cotta, gray and bronze. It is very easy work and extremely stunning.

Shirt Waist Ironing Plan.

It is difficult to iron between the buttons on a shirt waist without breaking them loose or leaving a puckered edge. A good plan is to have a very thick narrow pad of flannel or canton flannel to slip under the right side for the buttons to sink into while you iron the wrong side, then run the iron once along the outside edge on the right side.

A LIVING SNUFFBOX.

Peculiar Role Mme. du Cayla Played For Louis XVIII.

There have been snuffboxes of gold studded with jewels, of delicately carved tortoise shell, filigree silver, porcelain, ivory, mother-of-pearl, humbler horn, wood and tin, but there is only one living snuffbox on record, and that was the particular luxury of Louis XVIII. of France.

"His majesty's snuffbox," as she was known throughout Europe, was Mme. du Cayla, a fascinating favorite at the Bourbon court. Her place at table was always at the monarch's left hand, and when during the course of the meal he signified his desire for a pinch of brown powder to titillate his fat nose she took a diamond studded box from her pocket, dusted just the right quantity of perfumed snuff on her snowy right shoulder and presented it to the king, who partook of it with profound pleasure.

As Louis was the greatest snuff taker at a court where everybody snuffed constantly, Mme. du Cayla's position was no sinecure, but the human snuffbox was well paid for indulging the king in his little fad. He presented her with a copy of Roymont's Illustrated Bible, and each one of the 150 engravings was covered with a thousand franc note. It was followed with the gift of "Bassnet's Sermons," interleaved with the same valuable paper from cover to cover.—New York Press.

ANTIQUITY OF CHEESE.

Homer and the Book of Job Allude to the Product.

Cheese and curdling of the milk are mentioned in the book of Job. David was sent by his father, Jesse, to carry ten cheeses to the camp and to look how his brother fared. "Cheese of kine" formed part of the supplies of David's army at Mahanaim during the rebellion of Absalom.

Homer says that cheese formed part of the ample stores found by Ulysses in the caves of the Cyclop Polyphemus. Euripides, Theocritus and other early poets mention cheese. Ludophorus says that excellent cheese and butter were made by the ancient Ethiopians, and Strabo states that some of the ancient Britons were so ignorant that though they had abundance of milk, they did not understand the art of making cheese.

There is no evidence that any of these ancient nations had discovered the use of rennet in making cheese. They appear to have merely allowed the milk to sour and subsequently to have formed the cheese from the caseous part of the milk after expelling the serum or whey.

As David when too young to carry arms was able to run to the camp with ten cheeses, ten loaves and an ephah of parched corn, the cheeses must have been very small.

Marvels of the Telephone.

The Electrical Review thus describes the minute electric current required in transmitting speech:

"The peculiar electric telephone current is perhaps the quickest, feeblest and most elusive force in the world. It is so amazing a thing that any description of it seems irrational. It is as gentle as the touch of a baby sunbeam and as swift as the lightning flash. It is so small that the electric current of a single incandescent lamp is greater—500,000,000 times. Cool a spoonful of hot water just one degree and the energy set free by the cooling will operate a telephone for 10,000 years. Catch the falling teardrop of a child and there will be sufficient water power to carry a spoken message from one city to another. Such is the tiny gienie of the wire that had to be protected and trained into obedience."

The News by Windmill.

In certain parts of Holland births, marriages and deaths are frequently announced by the windmills instead of in the newspapers. When a miller gets married he stops his mill with the arms of the wheel in an oblique position and with the sails unfurled. His friends and guests often do likewise with their mills in token of the ceremony. To indicate a birth the wheel is stopped with the arms in a slanting position, but at a more acute angle than for a marriage and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die the sails of his mill are all furled and the wheel is turned round until the arms assume an upright cross, in which position they are left until after the funeral has taken place.—Harper's Weekly.

WHILE THE PLUM TREES ARE IN BLOOM.

Everytime we lose anything we gain something", said Emerson. Is not that very true when you think it over? The loss may be a friend, property or money; in every case in life the point that Emerson made holds good. While the plum trees are white with beautiful blossoms and the leaves are beginning to come forth it is timely to count our gains. Matters not how much we lose, we gain. Time is the only thing we cannot call back. Banks break and we lose our savings, but we can make more; lose our health and we always have hopes of restoring it; make mistakes and we profit by them. Life cheerily goes on and it is useless to worry over spilt milk—especially when you did your best in putting the pitcher on the shelf that it might not get turned over. It is better to save money and lose it, than to live extravagantly and waste it.

The failure of the Two States Bank naturally has brought disappointment and discouragement to Stephensport and the community. Words cannot turn the clouds that hang over them. Only activity and quickly passing days will reveal the silver linings. Work. Beautify your home and town, improve your farm, make your surroundings attractive with trees and flowers. By labor and simple plans Stephensport could be made an exceptionally pretty place instead of a cemetery of lost fortunes and neglected opportunities. The less you talk about the bank failure in the stores, around the station, on the trains, over the back fence and the harder you work and more you think of everything else, the better and happier will be you who have lost Just Money.

The closing of the Two States Bank and the others who have recently shut their doors should strengthen our faith in the banking institutions that survive. Let us trust our banks. Now we can be assured that in the future the banking business will be more carefully managed and closely watched in Kentucky.

Erring churches should inaugurate an Open Door Policy "Tuberculosis Day," says The Courier-Journal.

The Churches and Tuberculosis

In commencing editorially on the movement for the observance of "Tuberculosis Day" in the churches throughout the state, the Breckenridge News offers a valuable suggestion as follows:

"The first move that some of the ministers ought to make about this great move is to ventilate the houses of worship in which they preach or see to it that it is properly done at every service. No better sermon could be preached than lowering the windows at the top. Half the time during the winter months janitors of many churches never raise a window. The auditoriums and Sunday-school rooms should be thoroughly aired as well as swept and dusted. Pure air, we think, is more vital than cleanliness to a man's spiritual welfare. A dusty bench would not hinder a man from getting religion, but in a church where the air is stale and stifling a man with religion is pretty apt to lose what little he has."

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, in some of his recent lectures has remarked somewhat sarcastically on the "dim religious light" of many of our churches wherein deadly germs hold high carnival. With all the preaching and teaching about the importance of fresh air as an aid to human health, it is much to be regretted that in many of the churches and public buildings there is no adequate effort at ventilation. People sit in poorly ventilated churches and wonder why they become drowsy in the midst of an interesting discourse. They do not understand why they have a headache or a tired feeling every time they attend church. About nine times out of ten the drowsiness, the headache and the tired feeling are the result of the impure air that is regulously kept in a building. Most church janitors and many of the ministers and communicants as well, seem to have a holy horror of fresh air.

It would be a good idea for churches which are erring along this line to inaugurate an open-door policy on "Tuberculosis Day," and see that it is maintained at all subsequent gatherings regardless of time or season. It will not avail much that we build sanatoriums for consumptives if intelligent people are to go on violating the fundamental rules of sanitation.—Courier-Journal.

Will Observe the Day

Rev. Frank Lewis, pastor of the Methodist church of this city, is arranging a program for a special service in observance of "Tuberculosis Day." Rev. Lewis observed the day at Greenville last year and was assisted by the women of the Civic League of that place. He is interested in the tuberculosis movement, especially in connection with the churches. He is so interested in church ventilation that he will appoint a committee soon to look after the ventilating of the church here. "The minister gets so in earnest and wrapped up in his sermons that he does not think of anything aside that," said Rev. Lewis, "But during revivals I always look after the ventilating of the church while the other minister preaches and it is my pleasure to do it, because I believe I understand church ventilation."

Rev. Farmer Favors It

The pastor of the Baptist church of this city thinks there is no greater movement than the observance of "Tuberculosis Day" by the churches. Rev. Farmer said as yet he had given no particular thought to the work in his church, but it was one he sanctioned.

Drop by drop the offensive discharge caused by Nasal Catarrh falls from the back of the nose into the throat, setting up an inflammation that is likely to mean Chronic Bronchitis. The most satisfactory remedy for Catarrh is Ely's Cream Balm, and the relief that follows even the first application cannot be told in words. Don't suffer a day longer from the discomfort of Nasal Catarrh. Cream Balm is sold by all druggists for 50 cents, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

LOUISVILLE MARKET REPORT

Hog Receipts Large and Lower Prices-Cattle Lower and Dull-Good Demand
For Lambs

Louisville, March 13.—Cattle—Receipts of cattle to-day were 1,105 head; there was about the usual attendance of local traders and butchers and some out of town buyers present, yet with a few exceptions the trade ruled dull and draggy; there was a fair call for choice hand-weight butcher cattle at steady to firm prices, some thought a few sales were made at an advance, but all others in the fat cattle line were dull to a shade lower; medium and common cows especially dull; feeder and stocker trade hardly as good as last week, yet a fair demand existed; bulls firm; canners dull; milch cows slow; not many heavy shipping cattle here; feeling easy to a shade lower on that class.

Quotations: Prime export steers $5.50 @ 6¢; shipping steers $5.50 @ 50¢; best steers $3.50 @ 5.50¢; fat heifers $4. @ 5.50¢; fat cows $3.75 @ 5¢; cutters $2.75 @ 3.75¢; canners $1.50 @ 2.75¢; bulls $3 @ 5¢; feeders $4.70 @ 5.50¢; stockers $3. @ 5.50¢; choice milch cows $3.50 @ 5.50¢; common canners $1.50 @ 2.75¢.

Calves—Receipts 114; market steady; best 75¢ @ 8.5¢; medium 6¢ @ 7.5¢; common 2.5¢ @ 6¢.

CHAPTER XVII

AFTER a few moments Valentine shook his head angrily and drew back a step from the safe.

"Red, got a handkerchief?" he snapped.

"Yes."
"Well, get moving. Come on—blind-fold me so that I can't see, so that every nerve will be centered on hearing the tumblers click—you know—the old gag."

"Sure thing."

Red scrambled to his feet and hastily tied a handkerchief tightly around Valentine's head, completely covering his eyes. Valentine stepped back to the vault, and Red crouched again at his feet.

Deftly, intently, the ex-convict manipulated the intricate mechanism of the vault.

"Hurry, Jimmy, that kid," urged Red, to whom the suspense was becoming unbearable.

"D—n you, be quiet! If you say another word I'll knock your head off—my hands are like leather."

He again sandpapered his fingers.

"You're bleeding!" exclaimed Red.

"What of it?" returning to his task. "Don't talk, I tell you. I heard it click—I missed it again" turning the combination slowly—but I felt it that time—I felt the dog lift"—Valen-time was intensely excited. "Red, there it is! Hurry with a match!"

Red, well acquainted with the duties required of him, by reason of the thorough education he had received from Valentine in the past, had been waiting expectantly with a match ready for the striking. At the word he illuminated the combination's dial with a tiny flame.

"What is it?" cried Valentine.

The other stretched himself upward and peered at the numbers on the metal saucer—

"It points to twenty-one!" he exclaimed.

Valentine again drew away from the vault.

"Sandpaper!" he cried. Red handed him another sheet. He rubbed his fingers softly across it. His raw, bleeding flesh could not stand more than the slightest contact with the rasping surface. "I'll feel every jar clear to my eyeballs now," he added. He turned the dial back and then forward and then four complete reverse revolutions. "That's the way to get them, Red"—two more forward revolutions—"bare, bleeding nerves"—a half turn back—"raw, throbbing nerves—a toothache in every finger end—eh, Red—there—match!"

After a moment:

"Fifty-two!"

"How many bolts did this door have?" asked Valentine. "Did you notice?" He went on turning the dial.

"Twelve."

"Thought so," jubilantly. "Can you hear her any more, Red?"

Red's ear was pressed against the crack of the vault door.

"No. And God knows I don't want to. Honest, Jimmy, I don't believe it."

"Oh, yes, you do. So long as she calls we know she's alive"—turning the dial slowly back—"here we are again. If this is eleven I know this old rotation—match!"

"Eleven!" shrieked Red joyously after a moment of racking suspense.

"I've got it! I've got it!" cried Valentine. "If this is it, Red"—reversing the dial again—"she's ours in another minute. Match!"

Red struck another match.

"Ten!" he cried.

A half turn of the dial forward. Valentine's sharp ear detected the sound as though another bolt had drawn back. "Here we are again! Match!"

"Forty-two," exclaimed Red.

"That's it—forty-two—that's what it should be. Do you hear Kitty now?"

"No. Good God, Jimmy, suppose, after all, she's dead?"

Two more turns of the dial.

"Keep your nerve, old pal—there—match!"

To George Doyle, standing in the doorway, the scene was one of gripping interest. The consummate, almost uncanny, skill of Jimmy Valentine was something to cause in the detective, experienced even as he was with resourceful and intelligent cracksmen, a thrill of genuine admiration. No wonder Valentine had proved the despair of the safe makers, the banking officials and the sleuths of half a dozen states. And a lieutenant governor had pardoned him!

As Doyle surveyed intently the operations of Red Flanagan and Jimmy Valentine in their superhuman effort to rescue their beloved little playmate, Kitty Lane, from the stifling clutches of the steel vault he became aware of a sudden though very slight change in the darkened room, the windows of which, opening into a shaft, gave almost no aid at all to inquisitive eyes. He glanced across the room to the bank that between them she and her father owned.

"One," announced Red as the match flared into a blue bright sulphurous gleam.

"That's it! That's the old rotation!" cried Valentine enthusiastically. "Ten direction, and, as he thoroughly appreciated, both Valentine and Flanna gan were too intent on their mission of rescue to turn for an instant from their task.

As Red struck the match at the latest command of Valentine Doyle saw the girl bend forward to better gain a view of the proceedings. The side of her face was illuminated by the light in the assistant cashier's office, and—could it be true?—yes, Doyle was positive that the form of the witness in the opposite doorway was none other than that of the young girl who had seen Jimmy Valentine in Warden Handler's office at Sing Sing and who had prevailed on the lieutenant governor to obtain his release.

Doyle's memory had not betrayed him. It was Rose Lane, who, returning to her lover's office in quest of him, had opened the door of the vault room and had, just as Doyle had done, caught him "red handed."

She moved forward, a step, as though to speak, but her attention was attracted by Doyle, who moved slightly. She saw him put his fingers to his lips, commanding silence. The girl therefore stood mute, watching the man she fondly loved "cop the gopher" in the bank that between them she and her father owned.

The ex-convict stood transfixed, as though an unwilling witness of a terrible inspiring tragedy. And to him the denouement was all of that. Doyle stood, his hands clasped behind his back, waiting for the other to speak.

Valentine, worn out by the strain of the day's events, was in no mood to continue the fight against the cool calculating, time abiding detective.

"So this is the end, Doyle," he finally said, with a wan, forced smile on his drawn lips. "The jig is up. Isn't that about it?"

The detective moved closer to the human prey for whom he had so long and so patiently and, so far as the government was concerned, had so expensively sought.

"Looks that way to me, Jimmy. But, remember, back there in Albany, I told you I'd get you some day unless you would do me a favor or two. Always remember that I gave you a chance to keep out of the 'pen' and you turned it down."

Valentine hung his head. Yes, he would never cease to remember the alternative of becoming a "stool pigeon;" that the detective had offered him the alternative of "peaching" on old Bill Avery and going scot-free; not until Doyle should command him to "turn up" some other friend and companion.

"Come, Doyle, make a quick job of this," was his answer. "You win after all. I'll go without!"

The detective interrupted Valentine by inclining his head and pointing to one side. The ex-convict turned—to see Rose Lane, in whose affectionate embrace he had lingered but a few minutes before on that memorable afternoon.

A deadly pallor overspread the girl's cheeks. She drew near to the two men, her hands clasped nervously against her heaving bosom.

"You saw!" exclaimed the distracted young assistant cashier, peering searchingly at the girl, and with an involuntary twitch of his elbow indicating the opened vault.

Rose nodded her head gravely, stared at the man she had loved and then at the threatening form of the detective.

Valentine strode to her, clutched a pink rose from a bouquet fastened at the girl's girdle. He pressed it in both his hands.

"You won't mind my having that flower, I know," he said brokenly. "I am going—to be gone a long time—and this I want you to know and remember through the years—my love for you—is the only clean thing I ever knew. It is complete, and it will never—never end."

As he concluded he wheeled to face the detective.

"That's all, Doyle," he said in hardly audible tones.

The central office man saw the real significance of the situation. No one with the slightest morsel of intelligence could doubt that the beautiful young girl before him was suffering as only a true woman can when the one she loves is torn bodily from her forever. As for Valentine—well, there must be something good in him after all, reasoned Doyle, if a girl like the banker's daughter could venture her whole life's happiness on the chance of his "going straight." The detective shifted uneasily on his feet as Valentine turned to him.

"Er—didn't you have an—an—engagement with—er—this young lady?" he queried hesitatingly.

Rose caught a ray of encouragement in his tones.

"Yes! Yes!" she cried, springing forward, her cheeks now aglow with the inspiration given by a newborn hope, "and it was an engagement that means my happiness, my love, my life and his life!" She reached forth her hands beseechingly toward Doyle.

The officer glanced quickly behind him and around the room, making sure that there were no other witnesses to his words:

"Then—he hesitated—"then I guess we'll just cheat the state of Massachusetts."

Valentine grasped the arm of his long time foe.

"You mean—you mean just what, Doyle?" he exclaimed excitedly.

"I mean that the lady needs you more than Massachusetts does. You had me going, all right, for awhile there today, Jimmy. But just to retain your respect don't think that I fell for that double negative photograph." With an abrupt "Good day," the detective swung around and disappeared through the door by which he had entered—went out forever from the life of Jimmy Valentine.

Valentine addressed the girl with justifiable trepidation.

"You understand" indicating the doorway through which Doyle had made his exit—"you know who—what he was?"

Rose Lane flung herself into Valentine's arms.

"I only know I love you!" she cried passionately.

He held her in fervid embrace.

"And knowing the truth about me that I—"

"Perhaps I always knew," she whispered fondly. "But if a woman loves she rejects that which does not fit into her dream, but if she loves as I—"

Valentine smothered her words with his kisses. Then, raising his lips from hers for a single moment, he exclaimed in a voice that rang with the determination of a man who would yield his life ere he broke his sacred promise:

"I'll live for you, Rose—all for you. And you'll learn that I am a man once more—a man among men of honor!"

THE END.

Do you know that all of the minor ailments, colds are by far the most dangerous? It is not the cold itself that you need to fear, but the serious diseases that it often leads to. Pneumonia and consumption are among them. Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can? For sale by all dealers.

HAVE YOU TRIED PAXTINE?

The Great Toilet Germicide?

You don't have to pay 50¢ or $1.00 a pint for listerian antiseptic or peroxide. You can make 16 pints of a more cleansing, germicidal, healing and deodorizing antiseptic solution with one 25¢ box of Paxtine, a soluble antiseptic powder, obtainable at any drug store.

Paxtine destroys germs that cause disease, decay and odors—that is why it is the best mouth wash and gargle, and why it purifies the breath, cleanses and preserves the teeth better than ordinary dentifrices, and in sponge bathing it completely eradicates perspiration and other disagreeable body odors. Every dainty woman appreciates this and its many other toilet and hygienic uses.

Paxtine is splendid for sore throat, inflamed eyes and to purify mouth and nose after smoking. You can get Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic at any drug store, price 25¢ and 50¢, or by mail postpaid from The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass., who will send you a free sample if you would like to try it before buying.

toward the doorway whence she had retreated a moment before.

Valentine, still oblivious to the nearness of Rose, raised his hands along the edge of the vault door, his back toward the entrances leading to the room. "I beat you! I beat you and saved the little girl from you," he murmured. Up and down he pressed his hands against the enamelled metal. "I beat you! I beat you!"

Slowly he turned away, and as he raised his eyes they met the implacable, scornful gaze of George Doyle Valentine started back. In the shadowy vault room he thought his eyes had played him false, that he saw only a vision conjured into a temporary existence by overwrought nerves and a correspondingly disordered brain. He pressed his hand to his forehead. Then the "vision" moved toward him. Yes, it was George Doyle.

The ex-convict stood transfixed, as though an unwilling witness of a terrible inspiring tragedy. And to him the denouement was all of that. Doyle stood, his hands clasped behind his back, waiting for the other to speak.

INFLAM- MATION AND PAIN

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I was troubled for a long time with inflammation, pains in my side, sick headaches and nervousness. I had taken so many medicines that I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. A friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to health. I have no more pain, my nerves are stronger and I can do my own work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after everything else had failed, and I recommend it to other suffering women."

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore health.

clay and loamy soils.

To reduce the amount of spreading to the minimum it is advisable to place the gravel on the nine foot roadbed by dumping two loads side by side, stringing them out just far enough to make the required depth.

Usually the gravel should be placed on the road commencing at the end of the road nearest the gravel supply so that the teams will aid in packing. As soon as the thirty or forty rods of gravel have been spread on the road it should be harrowed with a spike tooth harrow, preferably one of the lever type. If but few teams are hauling the harrow may be used twice daily—just before quitting time at noon and again at night.

If a hundred yards or so of gravel are hauled to the road daily one team should be working on the harrow all the time. The harrowing should be done the same for both courses. As soon as the gravel has been well wet by rains it should be rolled with the best roller available.

Gravel roads are popular in Michigan for the following reasons: Because they are durable and satisfactory; because they are easily built and easily repaired, requiring no expensive machinery; because the first cost is low; because they draw a relatively large state reward, frequently one-third or more of their cost; because they are a labor proposition from start to finish and keep all the money spent in their construction at home. If you have gravel, build a gravel road.

WHAT MARION HARLAN SAYS.

Her New Year Message to Discouraged Housewives.

Perhaps there is no more familiar name and certainly none that carries more weight in household advice than that of Marion Harlan, who has been writing for women longer than any other woman writer. Mrs. Edward Terhune (Marion Harlan) recently celebrated her eightieth birthday and was the recipient of many letters, telegrams and gifts from all over the country. She is best known by her cookbooks, but her household talks, written for newspapers, are read by women all over the country. The following is an extract from her New Year's talk to housekeepers: "The year that is dead was trying to thousands of wives and housemothers throughout our land. It has been especially so to wives through the perfection of their loving sympathy with husbands struggling against financial difficulties and fighting the battle of life as those that beat the air. Hundreds have lost positions that seemed secure. More have felt the fetters of debt contracted because it was a simple impossibility to make one dollar do the work of two. Housemothers have grown old under the stress of that same problem. One said to me yesterday:

"It is always the same story, 'Unto him that hath shall be given.' My husband lost, through no fault of his, a situation he had held with honor for fifteen years. The head of the firm had a brother-in-law whom he wished to put into Harry's place. He picked a quarrel with my husband for that reason and none other. That man rides to his place of business every morning in his motorcar. Last summer he took his wife abroad and did the continent in his own machine. We have used up the small sum we had put away toward a rainy day, and Harry has just secured a situation after six months' agonized search for one. His salary is half of that we had for twelve years, and the price of living is twice as great. Napoleon said Providence is on the side of the army that has the biggest guns. In our country the Lord sides with those that have the most money."

"If I were to reveal the secrets of the confessional in which scores of other women have poured out to me tales as sad and misanthropy as bitter, this would be a dark page. For them the year of our Lord 1910 has been like the very valley of the shadow of death. Would to heaven I could set every one of these upon the sunlit peaks of Darlen and turn the wan eyes toward a brightening horizon!"

"To each my motherly counsel is: First, and above all else, hold fast to your faith in the Father's wisdom and love for you—you personally and individually! With this persuasion bound upon the falling heart, grasp the 'next duty' with both hands and take short views of life."

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind pustules yield to Doan's Ointment. Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. All druggists sell it.

For Peace Only.

It is well known that the Friends have always been devoted to the principles of peace. As they had a controlling influence in the public affairs of Nantucket, there was no military organization on that island for several generations. How the matter was managed is told by the author of "September Days on Nantucket."

Whenever military companies came to the island for a holiday young women thronged the windows and waved handkerchiefs, but there was no rise of military ambition in the town. Once a coterie of young men formed a training company and sent to Boston for equipments, but their elders compelled them to make the first article of their constitution read, "This company shall be disbanded immediately in case of war."

YOUNG GIRL'S COIFFURE.

What to Do With Hair Beyond "Bobbed" Age.

Many mothers are puzzled these days to decide how to arrange the hair of the little daughter when she gets beyond the age of "bobbed" hair or curls tied with a bow.

Simplicity and becomingness must both be achieved and the tastes of the girl herself taken into consideration.

For a young girl, say, from thirteen to fifteen years who is too tall to wear her hair hanging loose about the prettiest and most becoming way of arranging it is to divide the front and back hair to make a pompadour, held in place by a bowknot of satin ribbon, the back part then caught just in the center and tied with a piece of tape, the end again braided and the braid doubled back and caught into the same piece of tape with a ribbon tied over it in a pretty bow.

By no means the least important part of the coiffure is the tying of the hair ribbon. Nothing makes a young girl look so untidy as a hair ribbon not carefully tied or one that is not a good color for the gown with which it is worn.

The method just described of arranging the hair possesses the great advantage that while it leaves the hair becomingly loose about the face the ribbon is at the same time held securely and will not be constantly falling off, as when it only catches the hair in the center of the back with nothing to keep it in place.

AFRICAN LIONS.

They Often Hunt in Couples to Start and Capture Their Prey.

Lions in Africa go hunting often in couples and then rather systematically. When, for instance, a couple of lions have traced out a kraal, it is to say, a place fenced by small cut thorn trees, where flocks of asses or oxen, goats or sheep are shut up for the night—the lioness approaches cautiously, prodding by every tree or bush to hide herself. At the same time the lion himself lies watching on the opposite in the distance.

Now the lioness exerts herself to arouse the cattle—which is not difficult, as they become excited merely by smelling a beast of prey—till the cattle are tormented to the utmost by fear and horror, break through the kraal on the side opposite to the lioness and thus fall an easy prey to the second night.

The lion chases his victim and throttles it by springing on its neck or breast and biting his teeth into this part. The hunted animal falls, and the lion now tears open the flanks. The lioness appears and has her share of the meal. Very often they cannot devour their victim in one night; then they come back to the place where the remains are on the following or the second night.

The lion's favorite food is zebra, quagga (of which there are few left in Africa) and wild ass. The meat of these three kind of animals is something alike in taste.

EX-KENTUCKIAN

Writes Of Travels Through
Texas, California, Colorado,
Utah And Oklahoma.
Meet Former Breckenridge People.

Mr. John D. Babbage.

Dear Sir and Brother Friend:—Enclosed is $1.50 for which send my Breckenridge News.

Would like to write to my old friends in Breckenridge county often. Living near Walter, Oklahoma, for the past four years. I decided to go farther west and on the 20th of December last, myself and family bought tickets to Grants Port, Oregon, thinking I would like the coast country. By not staying long one may judge how we liked it.

We went north from Walter, Okla., to McFarland, Kansas, then west to Colorado Springs, through Grand Cannon and Soldier Summit to the great Salt Lake City through the greater portion of this country. Look like it would make a Jack Rabbit hustle to thrive.

When we got into Sacramento Valley it looked much better. After we left Sacramento and traveled north it was over and through mountains to Grants Port, Arizona. There we found it either raining or snowing all the time we were there except two days.

On our return we boarded the Southern Pacific train to Los Angeles, Cal., coming south through California. We saw some fine country and some not so good.

There we stayed a few hours with my wife's niece, Mrs. Jordan W. Adkisson. From there we came East and through Southern New Mexico and south-west Texas, to San Antonio three months, and east to Durant, Okla., where we found quite a lot of old Kentucky folks, Haynes and Short, formerly of Cloverport, D. G. Harned, Art Goodman, Ed. Goodman and many others whom we had formerly known in Kentucky and old Breckenridge county.

Any my friends who wish to write me, address me at Albany, Okla. Would be glad to hear from any of my old friends.

While The Press Thunders

BY LOUISE

An apology for a poorly tailored suit, a back number hat, etc., merely calls attention to them. The best way to make people forget your old rags, get them to talking about their own togs and nine times out of ten, they will never give yours a thought. Dirt, though, uncleanliness, is what you can't keep people from noticing. It is just like an ink spot on an interesting letter.

Dish washing makes the hands soft and smooth. Not a speck of cold cream have we used this winter and washing the dishes has fallen our lot every day except Monday and Tuesday since Mildred went to college.

Arugus, of The Louisville Times, it is said, knows more men than any newspaper man in Kentucky. His column, "Side Glances" verifies the fact.

A young man is so changeable in the spring time; one day his fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, the next day seriously to thoughts of a new suit!

HALF MINUTE TALKS WITH OUR CORRESPONDENTS

No. 5. Last week the letters from Tobinsport and Lodiburg were left on the hook with a lot of other live copy because half the office force was off. There is a good reason whenever your correspondence fails to appear. So forgive us—and you will—as it shows narrowness and ignorance not to. Sometimes, you will find that the most intelligent and best educated people will never forgive an editor or newspaper worker for a mistake made impulsively. Anyway just keep writing about their trips, etc.; never put your personal feelings in your news letters. Learn to forgive and the news items will make you forget.

It was fine to hear from Vanzant, Raymond, Mooleyville and Union Star. If you know of any couple to marry soon ask them for the announcement of their engagement.—A. L. B.

"FREEZE" AND "BURN."

These Two Words Had a Common Parent In One Aryan Root

We are likely to consider "freeze" and "burn" as two distinctly opposite effects, but if, for a simple experiment, you will touch your tongue to a bit of heated iron and to a bit of iron that is extremely cold the effects, as shown in the blisters produced and in the sensation of the contacts, will be found to be surprisingly alike.

It is doubtful if our Aryan ancestors when they were planting the seed of the English and its sister languages thought or the scientific relations of what we call heat and cold, but they gave to us the root "prus," which they got out of the sensations produced by burning and freezing. As usual, Aryan roots beginning with the "p" sound change it to "f" on the tongues of the Teuton; so with these our more modern ancestors "prus" became "frus," and from it came our "freeze" and "frost." Again, as is usual, our Hindu brother in his Sanskrit usually preserves the Aryan "p" sound, so he has from this root "prush," meaning to burn.

This root of freeze became "frosoan"

In Anglo-Saxon, which is our "frozen." In Icelandic it became "frjosa," in Swedish "frysja" and in Danish "fryse." In the Latin the original "p" sound is retained in "pruina," meaning hoarfrost, and in "pruna," signifying a burning coal. Here we see unified two apparently opposite meanings growing out of the old root "prus."—New York Herald.

Two Men.

A feeble man can see the farms that are fenced and tilled, the houses that are built. The strong man sees the possible houses and farms. His eye makes estates as fast as the sun breeds clouds.—Emerson.

High Class.

Teacher—What class of birds does the hawk belong to, Tommy? Tommy—Birds of prey. Teacher—Now, Johnny, to what class does the quail belong? Johny—Birds on toast.—Chicago News.

A Sure Cure.

Doctor, my wife has lost her voice. What can I do about it?

that her former plays have set. The stage settings, to use theatrical parlance, are all interior, which gives Miss George an abundant opportunity to display in several gowns the artistic ideas of some of the French dressmakers, and those who have seen her in former plays appreciate with what dainty grace and charming effect she wears these effective creations.
